Interstate Portability of Long Service Leave Entitlements

Following an agreement between similar long service leave Schemes operating in New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory; workers can have their interstate service recognised when qualifying for long service leave in Western Australia.

What does this mean to me?

Under the Agreement you can work in the construction industry in more than one State/ Territory and have the service interstate recognised by the other Schemes.

For example: If you had worked interstate and accumulated:

2 years service in Victoria

2 years in South Australia and

3 years in Western Australia and if you currently work or last worked in WA

you would now be eligible to claim a long service leave benefit in Western Australia having accrued a total of 7 years service overall which is the minimum service requirement to gain a benefit in the WA Scheme.

A complete list of contact information is shown at the back of this brochure.

Common Questions About Interstate Long Service Leave

When can I apply for my long service leave?

The minimum number of service days required to claim long service leave varies from State to State.

Pro rata (proportionate) long service leave in Western Australia is applicable after 7 years service in the construction industry, giving you 6 weeks leave.

In WA you can also claim your 8½ weeks long service leave, paid at the ordinary rate of pay, when you have accumulated 10 years of service in the construction industry.

In which State do I apply?

You apply for long service leave with the State Scheme in which you currently or last accrued service.

When I move to a new State can my service be transferred to the Scheme in the new State?

No. Each Scheme is based on individual State legislation and due to the differences between the Schemes in regard to entitlements and the way Schemes are funded it is not possible to transfer service between Schemes. However, we do recognise interstate service.

You need to keep track of the service you have accrued in each State yourself. When you have sufficient service for an entitlement in the Scheme in which you currently or last received service you can make a claim in that State.

How can I work out if I have an entitlement?

A help sheet is shown on the back of this brochure to give you a guide as to how you can check your current situation.

How is the amount to be paid to me for my long service leave calculated?

When you make a claim that involves interstate service, each State Scheme determines how much your entitlement in that State is, using the rates of pay applicable in their State. WA uses the ordinary rate of pay for its portion of accrued entitlement. You are then paid the sum of the amounts calculated by each State.

Common Questions About Interstate Long Service Leave

Do I need to advise MyLeave of my interstate service?

Only if you have received a notice regarding cancellation of your accrued service in WA. In the meantime, you should keep a record of the service accrued in each State you have worked.

The Annual Notice sent to you each year by the Western Australian Scheme will only contain the service accumulated in Western Australia.

When I change my address who do I need to advise?

You need to advise all the Schemes that you are currently registered with. It is your responsibility to ensure your address is current with each Scheme.

This can be done by email, fax, phone or letter or by logging onto each Scheme web site.

What if I have a query with my service days?

Contact the State Scheme in question.

What if I am about to be de-registered in another State?

If you are now working in the construction industry in Western Australia and you are about to be de-registered by a Scheme in another State you should advise that State of your registration in Western Australia.

Important Points

Please be aware that entitlement information recorded by State Schemes is subject to final verification with your employers at the time of processing your claim for long service leave payment.

An employee should never submit a resignation or plan to go on long service leave unless the State Scheme in which the claim is made has confirmed that they do in fact have an entitlement due.

Calculation Guide

Use this guide for calculating if you have a long service leave benefit where you have Interstate Service.

1. What State Scheme am I currently receiving service in or if no longer receiving service what was the last State that I had service in?

2. What is the minimum amount of service needed to obtain a benefit in that State Scheme? (for example in WA you need a minimum of 7 years service to obtain a benefit.)

3. How much service in years and months have I accrued in each Scheme as shown on my Annual Statements of Service?

	Years	Months
WA	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
NSW	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
VIC	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
QLD	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
SA	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
ACT	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
NT	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
TAS	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>
Total Accrued Service	<input type="text"/>	<input type="text"/>

4. Is the Total Service more than I need to obtain a benefit as shown in number 2 above?

YES NO

If yes you can lodge a claim otherwise you need to accrue more service.
